Day 1: Photo Exhibition

Palani Kumar is an engineer-turned-documentary photographer. He is best known as cinematographer for the critically acclaimed documentary "Kakkoos" which is about the lives of manual scavengers. He is a fellow of the People's Archive of Rural India, and recipient of Public Relations Society of India's Best Story of the Year Award 2020.

Reframed North Chennai through the lens of young residents

North Chennai – the birthplace of Gaana, the melting pot of cultures and cuisines, home to Chennai's best athletes – is all that and more. Referred to as Black Town in the days of the British Raj, North Chennai even today remains a site of discrimination, with its disproportionality high concentration of dirty, toxic industries located amidst historically marginalized and predominantly working-class communities. For all the unfair treatment it has suffered. North Chennai- to its residents – is a complex emotion. “REFRAMED” presents the religion from the lenses of six young residents, including one 22-year-old and 5 children ranging in age from 14 to 17. The photographs tell stories about work, play, joy and mourning in North Chennai.

Day 2: Hospitality team

We and our team did some work as volunteers at the Ahimsa market held in Madurai. And we are the ones who welcome guests and special guests to events held there. Through this we got to know many people. Through this event we learned about how to coordinate an event. And we developed our skills. We learned many new things and listened to the lectures of many social entrepreneurs. Through these sessions we got many solutions to our problems. We made new network of people.

Day 5 : Workshop team

In the workshop team, we were coordinating all the workshops conducted and we had a huge interaction with the resource person and the students over there. The entire process was a learning period for me personally. We coordinated more than 10 workshops and without any flaw we accomplished them. The main learning was the communication with random people and also the kids.
