Madras School of Social Work

Madras School of Social Work (MSSW), founded by Mary Clubwala Jadhav, was established in 1952, located in Chennai, South India. MSSW is an Autonomous Institution, NAAC accredited with A+ Grade and affiliated to University of Madras. The school is run under the aegis of the Society for Social Education and Research (SSER). The college aims at becoming a global leader in education, research and intervention in social work towards transforming potential youth into socially sensitive change agents for sustainable development. MSSW is rated among the Top 5 Best Social Work Colleges in India and South India by Outlook and India Today magazines.

National Social Work Conference

The world is facing unprecedented challenges in the 21st century, including climate change, poverty, inequality, and social injustice. These challenges require holistic and sustainable social work approaches that promote transformative change and that ensures social justice. The National Social Work Conference aims to explore sustainable social work interventions for transformative changes addressing issues such as poverty, inequality, social injustice and exclusion of the marginalized sections in the society. Apart from civil societies, businesses and governments, even companies are recognizing the need to reduce their environmental footprint and adopt more sustainable business models. The rapid pace of technological change is disrupting traditional industries and creating new opportunities and challenges as well. This is leading to a greater demand for organization to adapt to new technologies, embrace innovation, and create new business models that are more socially and environmentally sustainable. The conference will explore the intersection of sustainable development and social justice, environmental justice and human rights, which are critical for promoting transformative change.

Objectives:

- To promote a critical understanding of sustainable social work interventions for transformative change and social justice.
- To explore the role of social work in promoting sustainable development addressing environmental challenges.
- To examine the intersection of social justice and sustainability in social work practice, research, and education.
- To identify best practices and innovative approaches that promote change and transformation in organisations and systems at large.
- To facilitate networking and collaboration among social work practitioners, educators, researchers, policymakers and other stakeholders to advance sustainable social work interventions for transformative change and social justice.
